4. Executive summary

OCTOPUS ENERGY LIMITED is a UK-registered private limited company incorporated on 14 October 2014, operating in the energy retailing industry with headquarters in London, United Kingdom [3]. The company is a subsidiary of Octopus Energy Group Limited, which holds 75% or more of shares, voting rights, and board appointment rights [5]. The ultimate beneficial owner is inferred to be OE Holdco Ltd, a UK-based holding company, though no formal UBO declaration is provided in the documents [4]. The company has faced multiple legal disputes, including a U.S. contract case and a UK High Court claim related to energy supply failures [16][17][18]. Adverse media highlights customer complaints over service quality and financial penalties, including a £3bn repayment to the UK government following the Bulb Energy takeover [34][38]. No evidence of fraud, money laundering, or corruption was found in the sources searched. However, ownership verification remains incomplete due to lack of a formal UBO declaration and full shareholder register. Further investigation is warranted. 6. Company overview

OCTOPUS ENERGY LIMITED is a British energy supplier incorporated in England and Wales on 14 October 2014, operating in the electricity and gas supply industry [3][26]. The company is headquartered at UK House, 5th Floor, 164-182 Oxford Street, London, W1D 1NN [3]. It provides renewable energy services to residential and commercial customers, offering smart tariffs such as AgileOctopus and IntelligentOctopus, and supports electric vehicle adoption through home charging and leasing [14]. The company is a subsidiary of Octopus Energy Group Limited, which holds 75% or more of shares, voting rights, and board appointment rights [5]. It has expanded globally, with operations in the UK, France, Germany, Italy, Spain, Australia, and the UAE, and has entered into strategic agreements, including a technology licensing deal with Masdar for UK battery storage management [12][21]. The company was founded in 2015 under the backing of Octopus Group and has grown to serve over 11 million households worldwide [4].

7. Ownership / UBO

UBO has not been formally verified unless explicitly supported by submitted documents. The following summarises ownership signals from available inputs. Identified UBO (per available evidence): Not identified. The ultimate beneficial owner of OCTOPUS ENERGY LIMITED is inferred to be OE Holdco Ltd, but no formal UBO declaration or ownership chart was provided in the KYC documents. The ownership structure remains opaque beyond Octopus Energy Group Limited, and no individual with significant control is disclosed in the documents. OCTOPUS ENERGY LIMITED is a subsidiary of Octopus Energy Group Limited, which holds 75% or more of shares, voting rights, and board appointment rights [5]. The ultimate beneficial owner of OCTOPUS ENERGY LIMITED is inferred to be OE Holdco Ltd, a UK-based holding company, which has no listed owner since September 2022 [4][24]. The ownership chain is opaque beyond Octopus Energy Group Limited, with no formal ownership percentages disclosed in the KYC documents [7]. The company is part of a larger group that includes subsidiaries such as Kraken Technologies and Octopus Energy Operations Ltd (OEOL), though no ownership stakes are specified in the documents [7]. No formal UBO declaration or full shareholder register was provided in the KYC materials, limiting verification [4].

8. Adverse media

Adverse media reports highlight customer dissatisfaction with Octopus Energy's service, including a 2026 incident where customers were charged £75 instead of £0 due to a billing error, prompting criticism as 'shameful' [35]. The company has faced scrutiny over its role in the Bulb Energy takeover, where it agreed to repay nearly £3 billion to the UK government, raising concerns about financial sustainability and public funding [34][38]. Additional reports allege that the company's rapid growth is dependent on continued shareholder funding, with a reported loss of £161.6 million in 2022 despite doubling revenues [34]. Critics have described the company as part of a 'crisis capitalism' model, with its business model reliant on government-backed rescues [24]. No evidence of fraud, money laundering, or corruption was found in the sources searched.

9. Litigation

OCTOPUS ENERGY LIMITED is involved in multiple legal proceedings. In the U.S., a case titled Johnson v. Octopus Energy LLC was filed in the U.S. District Court for the Northern District of Texas on 4 February 2025, alleging breach of contract [16]. In the UK, Phillip Christopher Cook initiated a claim in the High Court of Justice, Birmingham District Registry, which concluded on 8 January 2026, relating to a prolonged energy supply disruption [17][18]. The claimant cited medical evidence of mental health deterioration due to the lack of electricity from April 2025 [19]. Additionally, the company was a defendant in a judicial review challenge by British Gas, E.On, and Scottish Power over the transfer of Bulb Energy's business, which was dismissed by the Divisional Court in March 2023 [20]. These cases reflect ongoing disputes related to energy supply, customer service, and regulatory compliance.

10. Reputation / management

Octopus Energy is widely recognized for its innovative approach to energy retailing, particularly through its use of smart tariffs and customer-centric technology platforms like Kraken [14][13]. The company has been featured in media interviews with its CEO, Greg Jackson, who is frequently cited for his vision on clean energy and customer service

[29][32]. The company maintains a positive employer brand, with a 3.5/5 rating on Indeed and recognition as a supportive workplace that encourages professional development [30][31]. It has also been acknowledged for its global expansion, including a strategic partnership with Masdar to manage UK battery storage [12]. However, public perception is mixed, with some reports highlighting customer service failures and financial risks tied to its rapid growth model [34][35].
